

December 17, 1999

Dear Friends,

This book will generate incredible debate. During the last five years, I have had the opportunity to travel to over twenty countries lecturing in the areas of science, technology and the environment. We have been guests on hundreds of radio programs for our earlier work on HAARP and other subjects. Our newest book represents the best of our research materials and will awaken even the most skeptical. We look forward to great interviews and getting this information out. I am sure you will be pleased with the well referenced and extraordinary material.

We are announcing my newest book, Earth Rising - The Revolution: Toward a Thousand Years of Peace. This book is the most extensive written work on new weapons technology, technologies which impact the environment and privacy issues and technologies which can change the very way we think. This book by Dr. Nick Begich with researcher and co-author James Roderick not only proves the existence of these technologies with its extensive documentation but, more importantly, raises the moral, ethical and legal questions which must form the foundation of the public debate that this book will ignite.

The book will begin shipping from our warehouse in early January. In the mean time, if you are interested in this topic, we can provide some additional information in advance of release or a review copy when released. Please let us know. The printer has advised is to expect the book at the end of the first week in January.

The Earthpulse Institute. Over the last ten years Earthpulse has grown from a small, quiet research group to a quickly expanding publishing and news organization. Our desire has been to invigorate discussion and develop solutions to some of the problems we see around us. We have had a great beginning in achieving success in several projects and have much waiting to be completed. Our effort started from the point of personal curiosity leading to early publishing successes. We believed that an activist publisher could make a difference. We are forming the Earthpulse Institute for the purpose of initiating a number of research projects in science, health, technology and politics.

The first significant project is to finish cataloging over 4000 documents on new technologies, scanning the documents and providing the research base to political leaders, organizations and researchers needing this material in order to solve the problems related to the technologies. Our past successes in our areas of activism are at a turning point, with this new title encapsulating our work over the last ten years.

Thank you again for your continued support.

Always In Service,

Dr. Nick Begich

Dr. Nick Begich
P. O. Box 201393
Anchorage, Alaska 99520
Voice Mail: 907-249-9111
Earthpulse Press
DrNick@alaska.net